A boat accident which might easily have been attended with very serious results occurred in Koh-si-chang harbour in the afternoon of the 17th July. There being a good breeze, several small craft put out for a sail, among them being the Hotel outter and one belonging to the Phra Chula Chom-Klao, About 3.30 p.m. a squal was seen coming down from the north-east, and the bonts reefed their canvas. At the time of the outbreak the disturbance was supposed to be a most insignificant affair and confined to the "Local Chief" the Orang Kaya of the Semantan, the district in which our depot is situated. Subsequent events have since proved it to have a much wid r range The following are the Chiefs who have deduced openly against the Government: the Orang Kaya of Somantan, To Mada of Jampal /a small okief whose Kampong is situated about 50 miles from Pakan on the Paining River, where Messrs. Stowart and Harris were murdered) and Mat Keila (son of the To Gajah, communder of the Sultan's forces) whose headquarters was at Boody, about 18 miles from Ranb. None of these Chiefs have yet been arrested although their followers have committed many murders. None of the great Chiefs of the State have declared their hestility to the Government, but it is well known that many of them are so. On the 22nd February, after receiving a noti-Seation from the British Resident that the disturbances were at un end, I sent Messra. Whyte and Bibby, Junior, to Lebok Tuah to assertain the state of affirs there. Mr. Whyte returned on the 4th of March, and reported that all the stores had been taken away including a large quantity of rice and galvanised iron, and also that the machinery consisting of two winding plants &c., had been rendered useless owing to a large part of it having been taken away and also some of it broken. Mr. Bibby, Jayior, remained at Lebok Tush to try and collect some of the missing property. While so engaged the Orang Kaya auddenly appeared on the scene and seized the police station there, containing a quantity of stores, 45 Rifles and between 2 and 300 rands of ball cartridges, Mr. Bibby, Janior. was released. Several times during the half-year it became a very serious question if we should not have to close the mine for want of supplies, but with the greatest difficulty we have mabaged to keep going. On several occasions the neighbourhood of the mountain; Ranb was threatened by the rebels, to be prepared for this, my new bungalow was strongly stockeded and every precention taken to prevent being taken by surprise. Under these circumstances it is impossible that the mine can be carried on with any degree of efficiency or satis-faction to the shareholders or myself.

MR. ROBERT BULLOCK'S

By the age of tweaty-sight Mr. Robert Bullook had come to the conclusion that life was extramely commonplace and unbeautiful, and it is perhaps needless to add that most of the inliabitants of the subarb where he lived agreed with him. But Me. Robert Bullook did not submit. like the rest of them, to be merely discontanted and resigned over the discovery, as over a matter which might not be altered by any means, but heroically set himself to work to find a method whereby some little beauty might be attained. I have had the privilege of intimacy with Mr Robert Ballock from boyhood, and I am a staunch prejudiced, nerhaps. admiror of his character, and I write this account of him that others, outside of the suburb at all events, may be brought, possibly, to think of him

CHAPTER 1.

HIS LORDSHIP'S LEGAL ADVISER. "How could I have been such a fool as to write them?"

MONEY," &c., &c.

Lord Desborough was sented in his official chair at his morocco leather covered table in Downing-street-a table heape I with parliamentary papers and blue books, who e perusal he had left to take out his wallat, and stare blankly at a couple of letters, both of which were in a formal clerkly hand, a character explained by the word "Copy" written in the top left corner of each. I must have been mad."

His lordship gave each letter an angry flip, doubled it, and carefully replaced it in the inner fold of his pooket book, which he thrust into his breast, and then sat with puckered brow, a handsome man of sight-and-thirty, white-baired and black bearded, gazing straight before him into space, where he was mapping out his future

"Yes; better take a dose and make my quietus," he said, half aloud. " Why the deuce loran't he come? He drew himself up, for at that moment the door was opened and an attendant brought in a

" Show him in." The attendant went noiselessly out over the thick Turkey carp t, and Lord Desborough threw down the slip of cardboard, enatched up a parliamentary paper, and began to peruse rapidly as the door was again opened, and keen-looking dark man, with peculiar puckers at the corners of his mouth, as if he were trying to suppress a smile, was ushor, I in. The new comer advanced silently two or three steps, the door closed behind him, and he stood slowly swinging to and fro a new glossy hat, and regarding through his thick brows the reader of the paper. "You miserable humbug!" said the visitor to himself

"Ahom!" coughed Lord Desborough, then, with an affected start, "Ah, my dear Mr. Auderson. I did not hear you come in." "Pray do not apologise, my Lord. State papers. The State's business needs no excuse." Thank you, Anderson; you are very good. but they must wait for a while. I want to consult you about a bit of business of my own." "Woman in the case for a fiver," said the visitor to himself. "Sit down, Anderson," continued his lordship pointing to a chair and swinging his own round so as to give himself room to cross one leg over his knee and hold it with both hands. Then the two keen men of the world sat gas-ing in each other's eyes ea if trying to read one another's thoughts. Thore was a pause of quite a minute, before Lord Desborough spoke. "Well, Auderson," he said. "I suppose must make a clean breast of it."

" Hest way, my lord, with the social doctors," "So ial doctors? Yes, that's what you lawyers are, confound you!" Lord Desborough wrinkled his face and made it look more in keeping with his silvered hair, the stronger for having been set aside so long. as he placed one white finger to his lips and then began to bite his neils, but snatched his hand away with an angry ejaculation. " I-I hardly know how to begin," he said, "It is very simple, my lord. I suppose you
